Continuing Louisiana Historic & Cultural Vistas's interest in providing resources to the public to better know and understand Louisiana Creole history, people, and their culture, I have abstracted and indexed the fourth register of christenings of the Cathedral-Basilica of St. Louis King of France, in New Orleans, Louisiana. This fourth register is a separate register for people of color, be they Louisiana Creoles, Native Americans, Africans, Americans, or from elsewhere. The register's christenings begin in 1777 and end in 1783.

As you leaf through the pages in this work, you will immediately notice names in both Spanish and French. This linguistic situation is peculiar to colonial Louisiana and other colonies of European kingdoms that changed colonial powers. The short story is that Louisiana was claimed for France in 1684, and until 1763, remained in that kingdom's hands. During this period, French was the language of state and church, as well as the language in which locals were acculturated. By the end of this period, a new language had evolved in situ, a language indigenous to colonial Louisiana, which is still spoken throughout south Louisiana in 2017. This new language became known as Louisiana Creole, aptly named for its local indigeneity. Today it is also widely known as Kouri-Vini.

In 1763, France ceded Louisiana to King Carlos III of Spain, a result of the Seven Year's War. Administrators representing Spain came from all corners of the Spanish empire, and made Spanish – not French – the new state and religious language. As a result, from 1763 to 1803, colonial Louisiana religious and civil records, especially in New Orleans, where Spanish civil and religious representatives were most numerous, were penned in Spanish rather than French.

For most Louisianians (by birth or residence), the Spanish language failed to replace French and the nascent Louisiana Creole, and as scholars have shown, Louisiana Creole, Canadian, and French Francophones (French-speakers) were hostile to the Spanish administrators, and reluctant to incorporate Spanish in everyday life. We see this convergence of French and Spanish languages in the registers of the Archdiocese during the Spanish period. The individual acts, recorded in notebooks held by clerics, are in Spanish. Yet, clerics indexed those acts in the French language, and sometimes in a mixture of the two.¹

Using the original indices and christening acts for the fourth register, I combed through every page of the index and individual acts over a two month period, and well over one hundred hours. I have only abstracted pertinent information to get researchers' feet wet. The organization of the sections and chapters may seem daunting, but I deliberately arranged them according to information in each act. Surnames are in majuscules to better distinguish them from forenames, aliases, aristocratic particules, and dit-names. I have maintained the original spellings of names to better illustrate the linguistic complexity of Spanish colonial Louisiana.

I am available to look up, and send copies of the original act for individuals in the pages to follow. I am happy to discuss our research, translation and mailing fees. Kindly email me and provide me with the name and page number provided for the act.

Dⁿ	Spanish	Abbreviation for don, a social title equivalent to Sir.
D^{ña}	Spanish	Abbreviation for doña, a social title equivalent to Dame and Lady.
el hijo	Spanish	Junior, i.e. Juan BLANCO el hijo > Juan BLANCO Jr.
el padre	Spanish	Senior, i.e. Juan BLANCO el padre > Juan BLANCO Sr.
esclave	French	slave (unisex) Eclave à/au/aux means "slave belonging to," e.g. esclave aux Religieuses = slave belonging to the [Ursuline] Nuns esclavo, esclava	Spanish	slave (esclavo = male, esclava = female). Esclavo/esclava de means "slave belonging to." Abbreviated to escl ^o or escl ^a , even e ^o or e ^a fil	French	Junior, i.e. Jacques LEBLANC fil > Jacques LEBLANC Jr.
hija, hijo de	Spanish	daughter of, son of incognito	Spanish	unknown/unidentified; used interchangeably with "desconocido"
M^a, M^{da}	Spanish	Abbreviation of "Madama," approximation in Spanish Louisiana to the French "Madame" madre	Spanish	means mother; often abbreviated to m ^e madrina	Spanish	means godmother, or the female baptismal sponsor of a person christened in the Roman Catholic Church; often abbreviated to mad ^a padre	Spanish	Used both for "father" in a family, and for Roman Catholic priests; often abbreviated to p ^e

coyote	Spanish	Unisex – Genealogical descriptor used in colonial Mexico and Texas, for persons of Indigenous, Spanish, and west African genealogical heritage. But the individuals described as coyote also shared a similar phenotype, which is depicted in many Mexican castas paintings, now widely available online.
cuarterón, cuarterona	Spanish	Cuarterón (male), cuarterona (female), spelling used interchangeably with quarterón and quarterona . Physical descriptor denoting white tan or white olive complexion. Likely evolved from an earlier racializer based on one grandparent being black or Native American. Equivalentents in Louisiana French: quarteron , quarteronne .
grifo, grifa	Spanish	Physical descriptor of persons of deep coppery complexion with fine, straight hair. Not to be confused with the Hispanophone Caribbean cognate, which in Puerto Rico, for instance, is a person of quite fair complexion with "wirey" hair. Spanish-speaking administrators adapted the use in Louisiana upon their arrival. Equivalentent in Louisiana French: griffe (unisex).
índio, índia	Spanish	Índio (male), índia (female). Racial descriptor for Native American. It sometimes is followed by the ethnic group, e.g. índio Apalache . Selvaje (also Selbaje) was used to convey the same meaning in Louisiana, though less frequently than índio . Equivalentents in Louisiana French: sauvage , sauvagesse .

mulato, mulata Spanish Mulato (male), mulata (female).
Physical descriptor of persons of medium yellow, red, or light brown complexion, with curly, frizzy, or straight hair. This usage was adapted by Spanish-speaking administrators in Louisiana upon their arrival. In other Spanish colonies, mulatos phenotypically are the same as the grifo in Louisiana.

Equivalents in Louisiana French: mulâtre, mulâtresse negro, negra Spanish Negro (male), negra (female).

Physical descriptor, often used interchangeably in Spanish colonial Louisiana with moreno. Both negro and moreno describe persons of medium and dark brown complexions with coarse hair.
Not all African slaves were negros.

Equivalents in Louisiana French: nègre, négresse.

pardo, parda Spanish Physical descriptor, often used interchangeably with mulato and cuarterón, for someone light brown, light yellow, or light olive complexion and straight hair.
